Isn't it fine? Listen:

"The night birds croon,

DEAF, DUMB, SHE SPEAKS

Helen Keller, Wonderful Woman, Hears and Sees by Vibrations.

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 30.—An event in the history of the south was the appearance of Helen Keller, characterized as the most remarkable woman in the world in Knoxville and at the National Conservation exposition today. Miss Keller has come back into the south for the first time since she left her home in Tuscumbia, Ala., as a small child to begin the studies and the achievements that have astounded the world. And what is more, Helen Keller came back into the southland to make an oral address.

When it is remembered that at the age of 19 months Helen Keller, following a severe illness, was found to be bereft of the sense of speech, the sense of hearing and the power to see, the very fact that she is now an educated woman and with the power to make an address to an audience becomes in itself all the more astounding.

The very study of the career of Helen Keller opens up an almost endless chain of speculation and conjecture. The miracles have been done. How? At the National Conservation exposition today Helen Keller and her devoted friend and teacher, Mrs. John Macy, told about these things. Great interest in the appearance of Miss Keller was aroused and a record breaking crowd was present. Persons came from long distances to see and to hear Helen Keller and Mrs. Macy. They wanted to know this young college graduate and all about her.

Helen Keller knew whether or not she was addressing a big gathering and knew whether or not her address was being well received or applauded, and this although she could neither see nor hear. How? By the sense of vibration. Her senses are so acute that she knows by the vibration of the air that reach her whether or not the crowd is large and these vibrations also bring to her brain the knowledge that applause is coming from her auditors.

Miss Keller, deaf, dumb and sightless, performed her part in the enactment of her life's story, by giving evidence of what has been called the most marvelous modern miracle—the teaching of speech to the dumb. She spoke aloud. She delivered a brief address in tones that reached the furthest seat of the balcony, words of infinite sweetness uttered in a voice which, while it lacked inflections, was clear, distinct and even penetrating.

The other actor in the drama classic in its simplicity was Mrs. Macy, who for more than 20 years has been the eyes, ears, speech key to the riddle of the universe for Miss Keller.

For more than an hour Mrs. Macy held the stage alone, telling the story of two lives that have been so intertwined that they have become almost synonymous for each other. She told of the finding of the deaf, dumb and blind child of six years, or her loss mastery of her character, of the gradual dawning of perception and the correlation of ideas.

"It took Helen Keller 20 years to learn to speak," said Mrs. Macy. "Her spoken words have given wings to her heart. They may be weak and broken, but they can fly. Day after day for 20 years she felt my throat, my lips, my cheeks, even my tongue, and my tongue that she might catch the movement of the muscles; and finally, through the labor of love of Charles White, a singing teacher of New England, she learned how to enunciate almost perfectly and has gained resonance and vibration in her tones."

MANY ACRES TAKEN FROM JEMEZ FOREST

Presidential Proclamation Eliminates 144,420 Acres and Adds 960 Acres to New Mexico Forest.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 30.—President Wilson has signed a proclamation which eliminates some 144,420 acres from, and adds about 960 acres to the Jemez national forest, New Mexico. The areas taken out of the forest have been removed with a view to excluding open lands and scattering stands of woodland not needed for the protection of important watersheds and of such quality that the expense of protecting and administering them is not justified. It includes several tracts of varying size. One contains something more than a township, or 36 square miles, located in the northwest corner of the forest, and bears a scattering stand of pinon and juniper, together with a small amount of pine.

The Gallinas valley, a long strip of rolling, open country in T. 23 and 24 N. R. 1 W. and 1 E., is also eliminated, as is all of the extreme southern lying west of the town of Cuba, with the exception of about 12 sections of mountainous pine covered land immediately adjacent to the Cuba valley. About 12 sections of thinly wooded country south of the Ojo de San Jose grant, and nearly a township of similar land at the extreme southern corner of the forest and adjoining the Canada de Cochiti grant, are also cut out. The eliminations are said to be good grazing land for the land for agricultural purposes.

The additions consist of three small areas of land, for the most part heavily timbered, as follows: Nearly eight sections lying south of the town of Coyote; two sections in T. 19 N. R. 2 E. between the Baca location and the Canyon de San Diego grant; and the NE 1-4 and NW 1-4, sections 22, T. 20 N. R. 5 E. The eliminations become effective December 1, 1913, and the land will be opened to settlement and entry at the discretion of the secretary of the interior.
